Report of Annual C.N.C.F Graduates Gathering 2024

Sri Lanka National Bible School Affiliated to the Ceylon National Christian Federation Graduates Gathering was held under the chairmanship of Missionary Rev.Bishop. Missionary David Jayanadan Appukutti (Switzerland), Pastor. Hosanna Joy (Truth And Light Life Church International (TALLC) Switzerland) & Rev.Bishop. S. Janaka Kumarathunga on 02nd July 2024 in Colombo. More than thirty five graduates pastors participated in this meeting.

Opening the friendly Gathering, Bis. Jasudasan gave the opening prayer and welcome speech. There he welcome & introduce our special Chief guest Rev.Bishop. Missionary Appukutty J. David, Pastor. Hosanna Joy to the ceremony and all those who were present in the place with great love and respect in God. Further, he started to give a description and introduction about today's program that he is talking about.

After the welcome speech, a good time of worship was then led by Pastor. Rashmika Das. From there, everyone remembered the powerful things that God had done in their life and offered thanks and worship to him.

Then came the main and most special moment of the program. Every priest who was present began to express their experience of service that day as evidence. Working in different areas of Sri Lanka, they began to express the various experiences and hardships they had to face and how God helped them in the midst of it. Although it was a very emotional occasion, may the place be filled with God's glory and His peace.

Our preacher was listening to all that very well and then proceeded to deliver his speech.

Message of Pastor. Hosanna Joy,

(Truth and Light Life Church International (TALLC) Switzerland)

This morning, I am very much happy hear about your testimony. I am happy that you all are still holding on to the Ministry no matter how difficult it is. At this moment, my heart remembering the psalm 43:5.

The Psalmist is in circumstances of trouble and sorrow. We need not enter upon them particularly, but the thing that I desire to point out is that three times does the Psalmist take himself to task and question himself as to the reasonableness of the emotions that are surging in his soul, and checks these by higher considerations. Thrice he does it; twice in vain, for the trouble and anxiety come rolling back upon him in spite of the moment's respite, but the third time he triumphs.

In the Psalmist's case, his gloom and despondency, which could plead good reasons for their existence, had everything their own way at first, and swept over his soul like the first rush of waters which have burst their bounds. But, presently, the ruling part of his nature wakes, and brings the feebler lower soul to its tribunal, and says, in effect, 'Now! now that I am here, what hast thou to say about these sorrows that thou hast been complaining about? Why art thou cast down, O my soul? Why art thou disquieted? . . . Hope in God!'

Did you ever see a child upon a swing, or a gymnast upon a trapeze? Each oscillation goes a little higher; each starts from the same lowest point, but the elevation on either side increases with each renewed effort, until at last the destined height is reached and the daring athlete leaps on to a solid platform. So we may, if I might say so, by degrees, by reiterated efforts, swing ourselves up to that steadfast floor on which we may stand high above all that breeds agitation and gloom. It is possible, in the midst of change and circumstances that excite sad emotions, anxieties, and fears-it is possible to have this calmness of hope in God. The rainbow that spans the cataract rises steadfast above the white, tortured water beneath, and persists whilst all is hurrying change below, and there are flowers on the grim black rocks by the side of the fall, whose verdure is made greener and whose brightness is made brighter, by the freshening of the spray of the waterfall. So we may be 'as sorrowful, yet always rejoicing,' and may bid dejected and disquieted souls to hope in God and be still.

God Grace be with you all the time

Message of Rev.Bishop. Missionary David Jayanadan
